OUT

principal's farewell

june 1980

dear seniors:

congratulations on your commencement.

you are about to embark upon an adventure as an adult — an adventure that should enable you to fulfill your aspirations. while at grover cleveland high school, you have developed the basic skills and acquired the foundation for the acquisition of culture, knowledge, and positive experiences.

this adventure will multiply geometrically as your appreciation of a multi-faceted life unfolds, as the bits of information are stored, used, and restored within your mental computer throughout the years.

this adventure will reach its zenith in the twenty-first century as technology and medical science extend your life well beyond the present three score and ten.

i hope you will enjoy each adventure and derive success, good fortune, and happiness each step of the way.

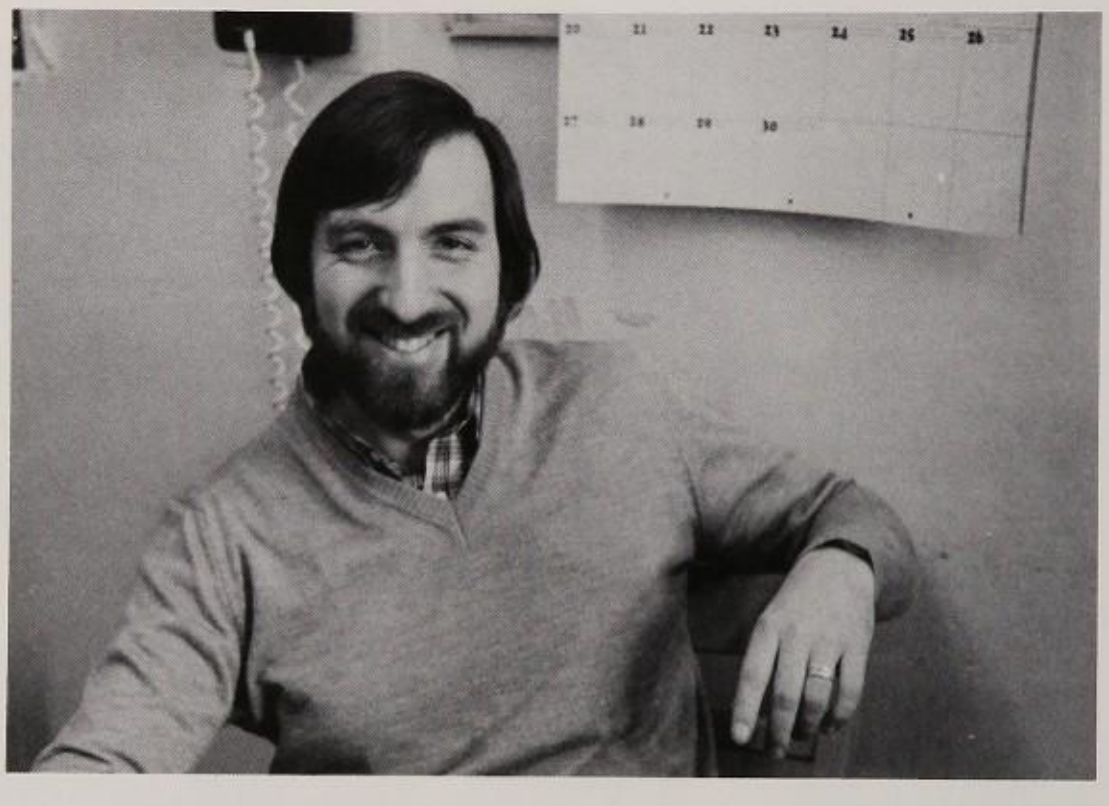
organizations

student association

the s.a. ranks as grover cleveland's largest club (yay!), with an annual membership in excess of 1,500. the dues paid by students upon joining the s.a. constitute a large portion of the funds. due to the dues, the s.a. is able to sponsor all of our chartered clubs (found in this yearbook) and all of our special events. this year's events included a dude ranch trip, a disco night, rollerskating parties and movie presentations.

r. howard chaskes, coas-spring, 1980



dr. howard weiner, coas-fall, 1979

besides wangling membership dues, the s.a. raises money for activities by selling eatables between classes. about $300 in candy, doughnuts, pretzels, and cookies are devoured each day, indicating the popularity of the idea. what would we do without those pretzels, huh? long live the s.a.

the student government is a committee of student representatives elected annually by freshmen, sophmores, and juniors. its members.are responsible for allocating the s.a. budget with deference to student needs and requests.

this year's government consists of several hard-working and intelligent young people. their inter-student communication policy is a continuation of former governments. it features open s.a. meetings where ideas and suggestions are discussed with those who avail themselves of the opportunity to attend.

a great deal of the student government's success depends on who's holding the reins. for seven years this responsibility rested successfully with dr. howie weiner, co-ordinator of student affairs, whose dedicated service will be remembered by those of us who had the experience of working with him. dr. weiner was relieved of his duties at the onset of the spring term by mr. howard chaskes, a capable leader in his own right. under this new leadership, the government hopes to be true to its long established record of success, and we wish them all the best of luck in attaining it.

the mini-school student senate is a group of exceptional students elected by their peers. members of the senate represent the student body in forums designed to discuss school policies and student concerns. the senate includes a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. each home room also contributes three student representatives.

the senate holds bi-monthly meetings with students and faculty members. during the course of these meetings, the senate presents suggestions for dealing with specific school or student problems. the senate opinion is actively sought and expressed in such issues as what classes would be most beneficial for the students involved, or where and how certain school activities should be held.

leaders-in-training is usually associated with "just doing service." but . . . just talk with a leader and the story seems to change.

the leaders themselves feel a bond as a group. they learn skills in every area available for exploration in physical education. this allows each leader to participate as an individual student while in training. once training ends, they become part of the educational "right hand" to the girls' physical education teachers. and by the time they receive their coveted "I", they have become educated, disciplines, and responsible — "leaders."

herald

the herald is grover cleveland's student newspaper. the newspaper is published monthly and is distributed free to all students and faculty. the staff, which is open to all students, covers all of the activities in the school and reports them to the student body.

mr. robert byrd, advisor

this year's dedicated staff has participated in many citywide journalistic activities and the newspaper itself has been awarded many citations for excellence. the staff and mr. byrd are hopeful of receiving another award this year. the herald is an important communications device for the entire school and community, and should be commended for continually providing this excellent service for us.

the consultative council is a group of interested and dedicated students, teachers, counselors, and administrators who meet every month with mr. liebrader. at these meetings, the council employs sopisticated techniques ("brainstorming") to come up with viable alternatives to important school and community issues at hand. the council strives to keep communication lines open between faculty and students for the express purpose of sharing information and ideas.

the cleveland scientist attempts to keep abreast of changes in the various fields of science. the staff produces both an annual magazine and an update which is released about five times a year.

in the annual magazine, students contribute their own reports for publication. this journal has been awarded first place by the columbia scholastic press association for the past five yars. the update contains summaries of current articles from well known periodicals such as the new york times and scientific american. both the annual and the update are popular with science-oriented students, who hope that grover cleveland will continue to turn out material of similar standard for many more years to come.

our aim this year was to present a superlative yearbook — and we have. we are convinced that we have broken more deadlines, angered more teachers, and upset more conventions than any of our predecessors. however, we hope that y'all think it's worth it, because in spite of all the trials and tribulations . . .

arista is a club associated with the national honor society. requirements for membership are a ninety-plus average for sophomores and an eighty five-plus average for juniors.

the function of arista is to render services to both school and community. this past year arista has been responsible for collecting food and monetary donations for a pet adoption agency called animal haven. arista also hosted a christmas party at the midway nursing home. while here at cleveland the club's two day cake sales have been very successful.

ms. helene kosoff, arista's club advisor of long standing, was obliged to leave cleveland in february of this year. mr. michael kilbert has now assumed the responsibility of arista advisor.

zoology

the zoology club is an offshoot of the zoology class, which is taught by mrs. marilyn cohen. this club has the responsibilty of maintaining the school zoo, making it possible for cleveland students to observe a variety of their furry and fishy friends. the club's charges are either donated or adopted. the cost of providing for them is met by proceeds from cake sales and other fund-raising methods.

in addition to taking care of the zoo, the young zoologists serve the animal community by seeking improvements in zoo conditions and animal care, club members make trips to a number of our city zoos to investigate the animals and the zoos themselves. qualifications for club membership: love and concern.

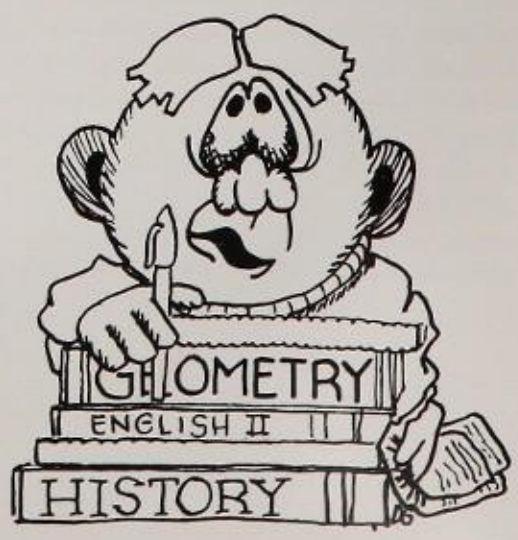
peer group

the peer group class meets regularly for credit to discuss every day problems concerning students. the purpose of the group is to provide information and assistance to students who are experiencing difficulties with school, parents, or friends. each member learns to understand himself better and tries to help others do the same.



science research

the science research club is under the supervision of both mr. richard plass and mr. harvey goodman. the club is a preparatory prerequisite for entrance in the queens, city, and national science fairs. exceptional students may join the club during their freshman, sophomore, or junior years in order to prepare their projects. in his senior year, each student may submit his research date in the form of a lengthy paper to the westinghouse science talent search program. the paper is then judged on the basis of organization and content.

as in the past, this year's science research club has produced winners in both the queens science fair and westinghouse program. oliva battaglia, ernie megdanis, araxi pasagean, and carolyn schmidt were among the winners at the queens contest. they will go on to compete in the city science fair and, if they place in that event, the national fair. this year's westinghouse semi-finalists are frances mazara, lucia nicolosi, and karen troyd. these students, together with the rest of the science research program, are outstanding exponents of the positive attitudes found in grover cleveland's science department.

students who have an interest in the mechanics of science will find a welcome outlet in the newly-founded physics club. supervised by mr. steven zellman, the group meets several times a week to discuss presentations dealing with certain aspects of physics. through this method, mr. zellman hopes to increase the spirit of inquiry among our young scientists.

the math team is a new club for students who are interested in solving problems in math. under the guidance of mr. norman pollock, the team competes with many other schools to see who can solve problems in the least amount of time. although they have just begun, grover cleveland's math team is currently in third position.

the senior band is an advanced instrumental performing group, directed by mr. samuel schneider. this band performs yearly at our january and june graduations. there is also a special concert by the band each year during the spring. we all should be proud of our senior band which boasts some very fine musicians.

each year the drama club treats us to a variety of theatrical presentations. past spectacles have included one act and feature length plays. this year's feature production was the spring play, "barefoot in the park". whereas the spring play has traditionally been presented by students acting in concert with alumni and community residents, the drama club has created this production on its own.

two classes, one of actors and one of technicians, comprise this club. the classes meet daily under the supervision of ms. linda reichel and mr. anthony gangone.

the presence of ethnic clubs in grover cleveland reflects the pride which students place in their backgrounds. as more and more students come to realize this pride, the number of these clubs seem to rise proportionately.

the italian club is one such newcomer. its purpose is to provide an atmosphere conducive to the study of italian language and culture. we wish the group all possible luck in meeting this goal adequately enough to ensure its continued existance.

the purpose of the afro-american club is to encourage the acquisition of respect for black culture based on historical information. students meet to better understand their own backgrounds and those of the students around them. the aspirations of the afro-american club are for better human relations in our school, community, and society.

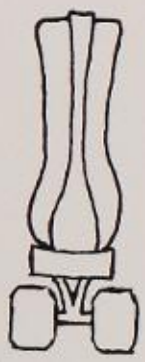
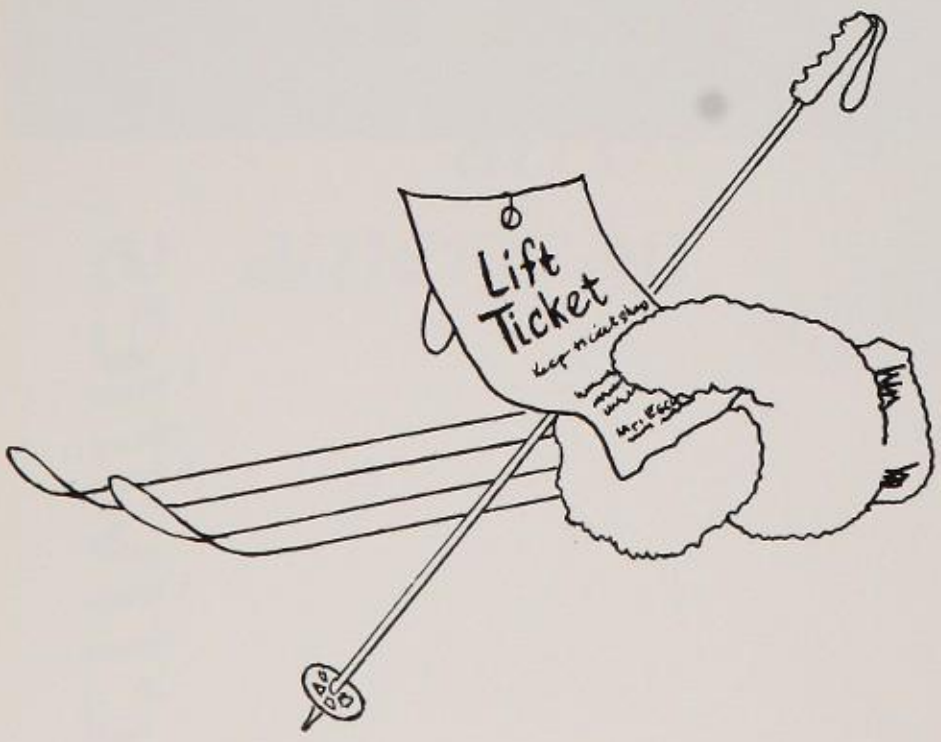
activities

roller skating



it's not walnut, it's not radcliffe, it's walcliffe! it's where grover cleveland students enjoyed last fall's roller-skating event. rock-rolling and falling to the music proved very popular with our skating party. this nifty evening at the rink was brought to a climax with a skating contest. winners were awarded free passes to radcl — uh, walcliffe rink.



for the second consecutive year, the girls' health education department has offered a ski class. the course, culminating in a four-day ski trip, is rather unusual: the classrooms are the slopes of a chilly vermont mountain, and the teachers, besides mrs. diane gurba and mrs. diane degroat, are three parkaed ski instructors. since everyone seems to have such a good time falling and skiing and falling again, it is to be hoped that this course will continue to be offered for many years to come.

this year's senior class is fortunate to have a dedicated and diligent advisor in mr. michael weinberg. he has been responsible for planning the senior special activities in this, his first full year as advisor. due to his efforts, the senior class enjoyed a dinner-dance at durow's, a trip to great adventure, and the prom at terrace-on-the-park. as a result, the seniors will bring away many fond memories of their last year at grover cleveland.

senior address

fellow students:

it is hard to believe that i entered grover cleveland high school only three years ago. it has been an experience for all of us, an experience that, i'm sure, none of us will ever forget. this was the year that many seniors were able to "find" themselves and evaluate their efforts. high school is preparation for one's future life and one should take full advantage of this. it proved to be a valuable and worthwhile life venture.

being senior class president was one of my most memorable accomplishments. this brings me to a point which i wish to make. while in high school, one should make the best of it and get involved, whether it be on a team, club, or student government. involvement is what made it enjoyable for me and many of my friends.

upon graduating, an entirely new life awaits us. high school is one of the most vital steps towards success, and, for those who are going on to college, it will be an even greater experience. this is what i consider to be the final step. in years to come, i hope that many grover cleveland graduates will look back at their days here with fond memories of cleveland and the friends that made the "class of '80".

the evening began on a relaxed tone. once in tune with the music, provided so superbly by the todd richards band, the momentum gathered and the tempo became electric.

as the evening neared its close, the strains of the last dance were heard again, as no one wanted this night to end. it had been splendid.

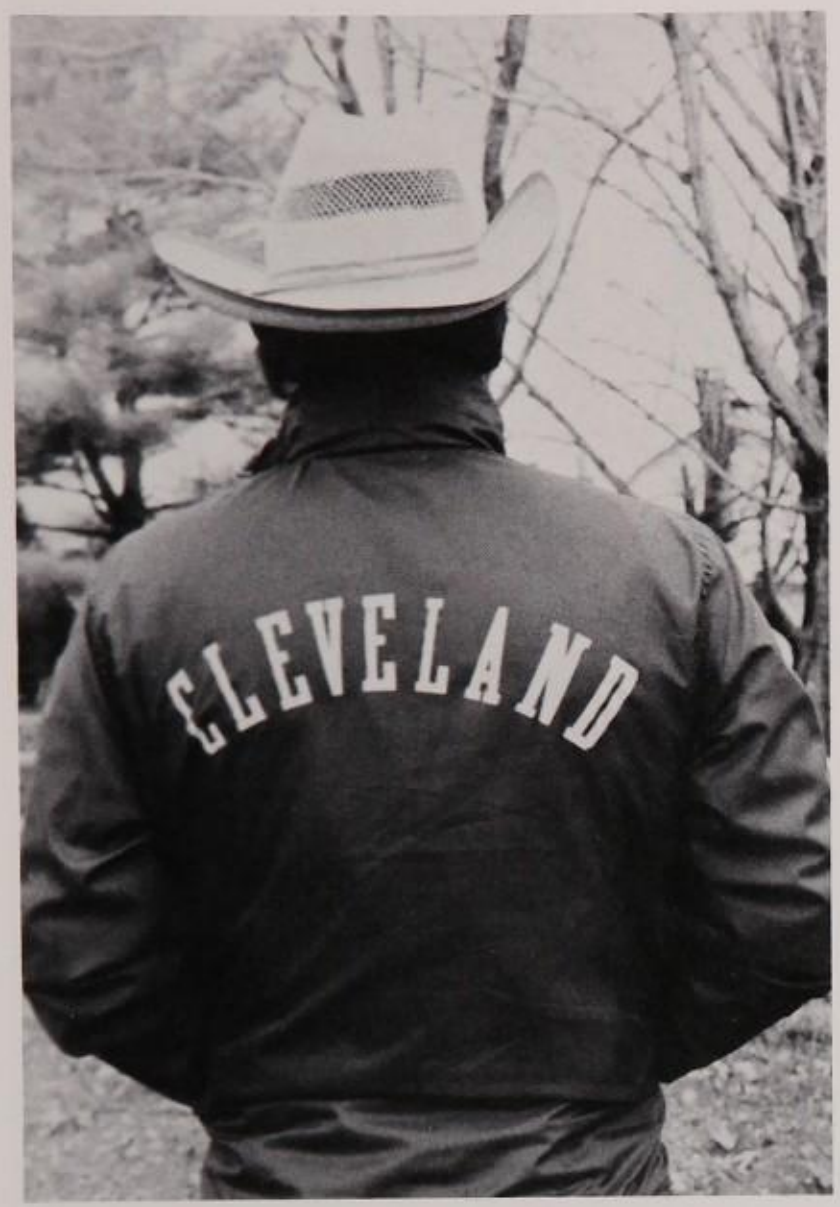
arena night

since disco has become so popular with the student body, the s.a. catered to its taste last fall by arranging for the exclusive use of the arena discotheque. students, teachers, and their guests responded so enthusiastically that a second date was set for the spring. this venture met with similar success. judging by these reactions, it is probable that the s.a. has initiated yet another tradition at cleveland.



each year, a group of cleveland cowboys and cowgirls head north for a day at the pinegrove dude ranch. once there, activities begin with an explanation of the facilities by one of the ranch hands. these facilities include, continuous horseback riding, an indoor swimming pool, tennis and volleyball, and go-karts.

every student can participate in any of the activities and the only requirement is that they not come late to lunch. as the buses slowly rode home into the sunset, we all had fond memories of a day of bumpy rides, splashy fun, and good friends.

unfortunately, january graduations have been growing smaller for the past few years. next year, january graduates will be invited to attend the commencements in june for one gala graduation.

being yourself

being yourself, relaxed, at ease, wanting
just to get away
for awhile.

needing time to get to know yourself better, to love yourself before you can begin to love anyone else
to your fullest extent.

needing to grow on the inside for full understanding and satisfaction out of life.

realizing your faults and trying to work them out by yourself.

after all in order to live,
you must grow and need
and be.

glad to have known you, dear heart, and i'll miss you i've learned more from you than you ever will know, but even this much will i hide when i kiss you as cold and duty-asked of me as before.
gradually now i'll let go of the feeling that makes me choke up like a girl in distress that makes me come here when you're gone where i'm telling the walls what i wish that, somehow, you could guess no danger of that, through, and god! how i'm suffering with pain all my fault, while i "couldn't care less."
dear heart, though it's crazy, it's more than you know:
glad to have known you, gladder still to see you go.

i love you too

the moon reflects off the calm black sea.
all are asleep but you and me.
we walk along the quiet beach,
i extend my hand and yours i reach.
the light i see in your soft smile will guide me on for many a mile.
as we walk and kick the sand, upon my waist you place your hand.
the words you whisper in my ear, are words that i have longed to hear.
your lips touch mine,
i feel devine,
i know it's true,
i love you too.

carolyn munetz

where is he?

minutes and hours go by
as the sun goes down and i wonder how much time went by, and
where is he?
darkness comes on fast,
but i don't mind,
and i wonder if he's coming here cause i miss him in the passage of time.
my heart grows sad
and emptiness fills within coldness chills my soul cause he's not here.
where is he?

mel nurse

you came like the night and touched my heart ever so softly but swiftly the time went and dawn was upon us
and like the moon,
you too disappeared

lorie firstenburg

a young girl growing up i remember giving birth to you on the operating table; the doctors said you were fine and my condition was stable.

i took you home that next day and held you in my arms.
while you have your mother's looks, you have your father's charm.
all the people on the block looked at you and smiled.
to be growing up in this world, your mother's child.
next the year came and you turned one.
from dirty diapers to fun in the sun,
the older you got, the more prominent your father's features.
scared stiff of funkenstein and all those cartoon creatures, i'd hold you in my arms and wipe those tears from your eyes, fix you a sandwich, and answer all your why's.
when you were four and ready to start school, i came too, because that's a golden rule.
when i was about to leave, my baby started to cry.
i told you that i had to go, you sadly asked me why.
but twelve-thirty came and so did i, to pick you up, and you turned out liking it, despite the morning's fuss.
life goes on, so it seems,
from cotton candy to lemon cremes.
now that you're off in junior high,
never a good morning, never a good-bye.
you've eaten your breakfast and in the summer air, breezes, as you run, waft through your wavy hair.
my child has fun
in the golden sun,
you come home from school looking older, feeling proud about talking on the phone and saying bad words out loud.
i used to tuck you in bed, and read to you at eight;
now you're outside all evening and sneak into your room late.
here in my bed, it all seems so near.
as i wipe away my very last tear, as i die my bed with a hole in my head given me by my child,
i remember the things that i need to regret,
and the lesson is anything but mild:
too much love is worse than no love at all.

antoinette stevens

a magician you were,
dazzling my thoughts,
rising my hopes,
placing a smile on my face.
mystically playing tricks on my heart.
but the biggest trick was your disappearing act.
it was the only one i couldn't figure out.

birth, life and death

birth . . .
with the slap of the hand a new person comes to life each year growing older each year growing wiser, developing its life to its fullest birth . . .

life . . .
facing reality, joys and sorrows hardships and pleasure wrapped into one learning through experiences doing rights and wrongs preparing and writing for what's to come
life . . .

death . . .
the final acclaim
frightening for some, peace for others a mysterious and unknown adventure not knowing what's to come then finally it happens the end.

lorie firstenburg

now that you're gone i've nothing to lose.
i know i should say that i'm hit with the blues, but if colors are moods, paint mine black:
when you've nothing to lose, it's love's light that you lack.

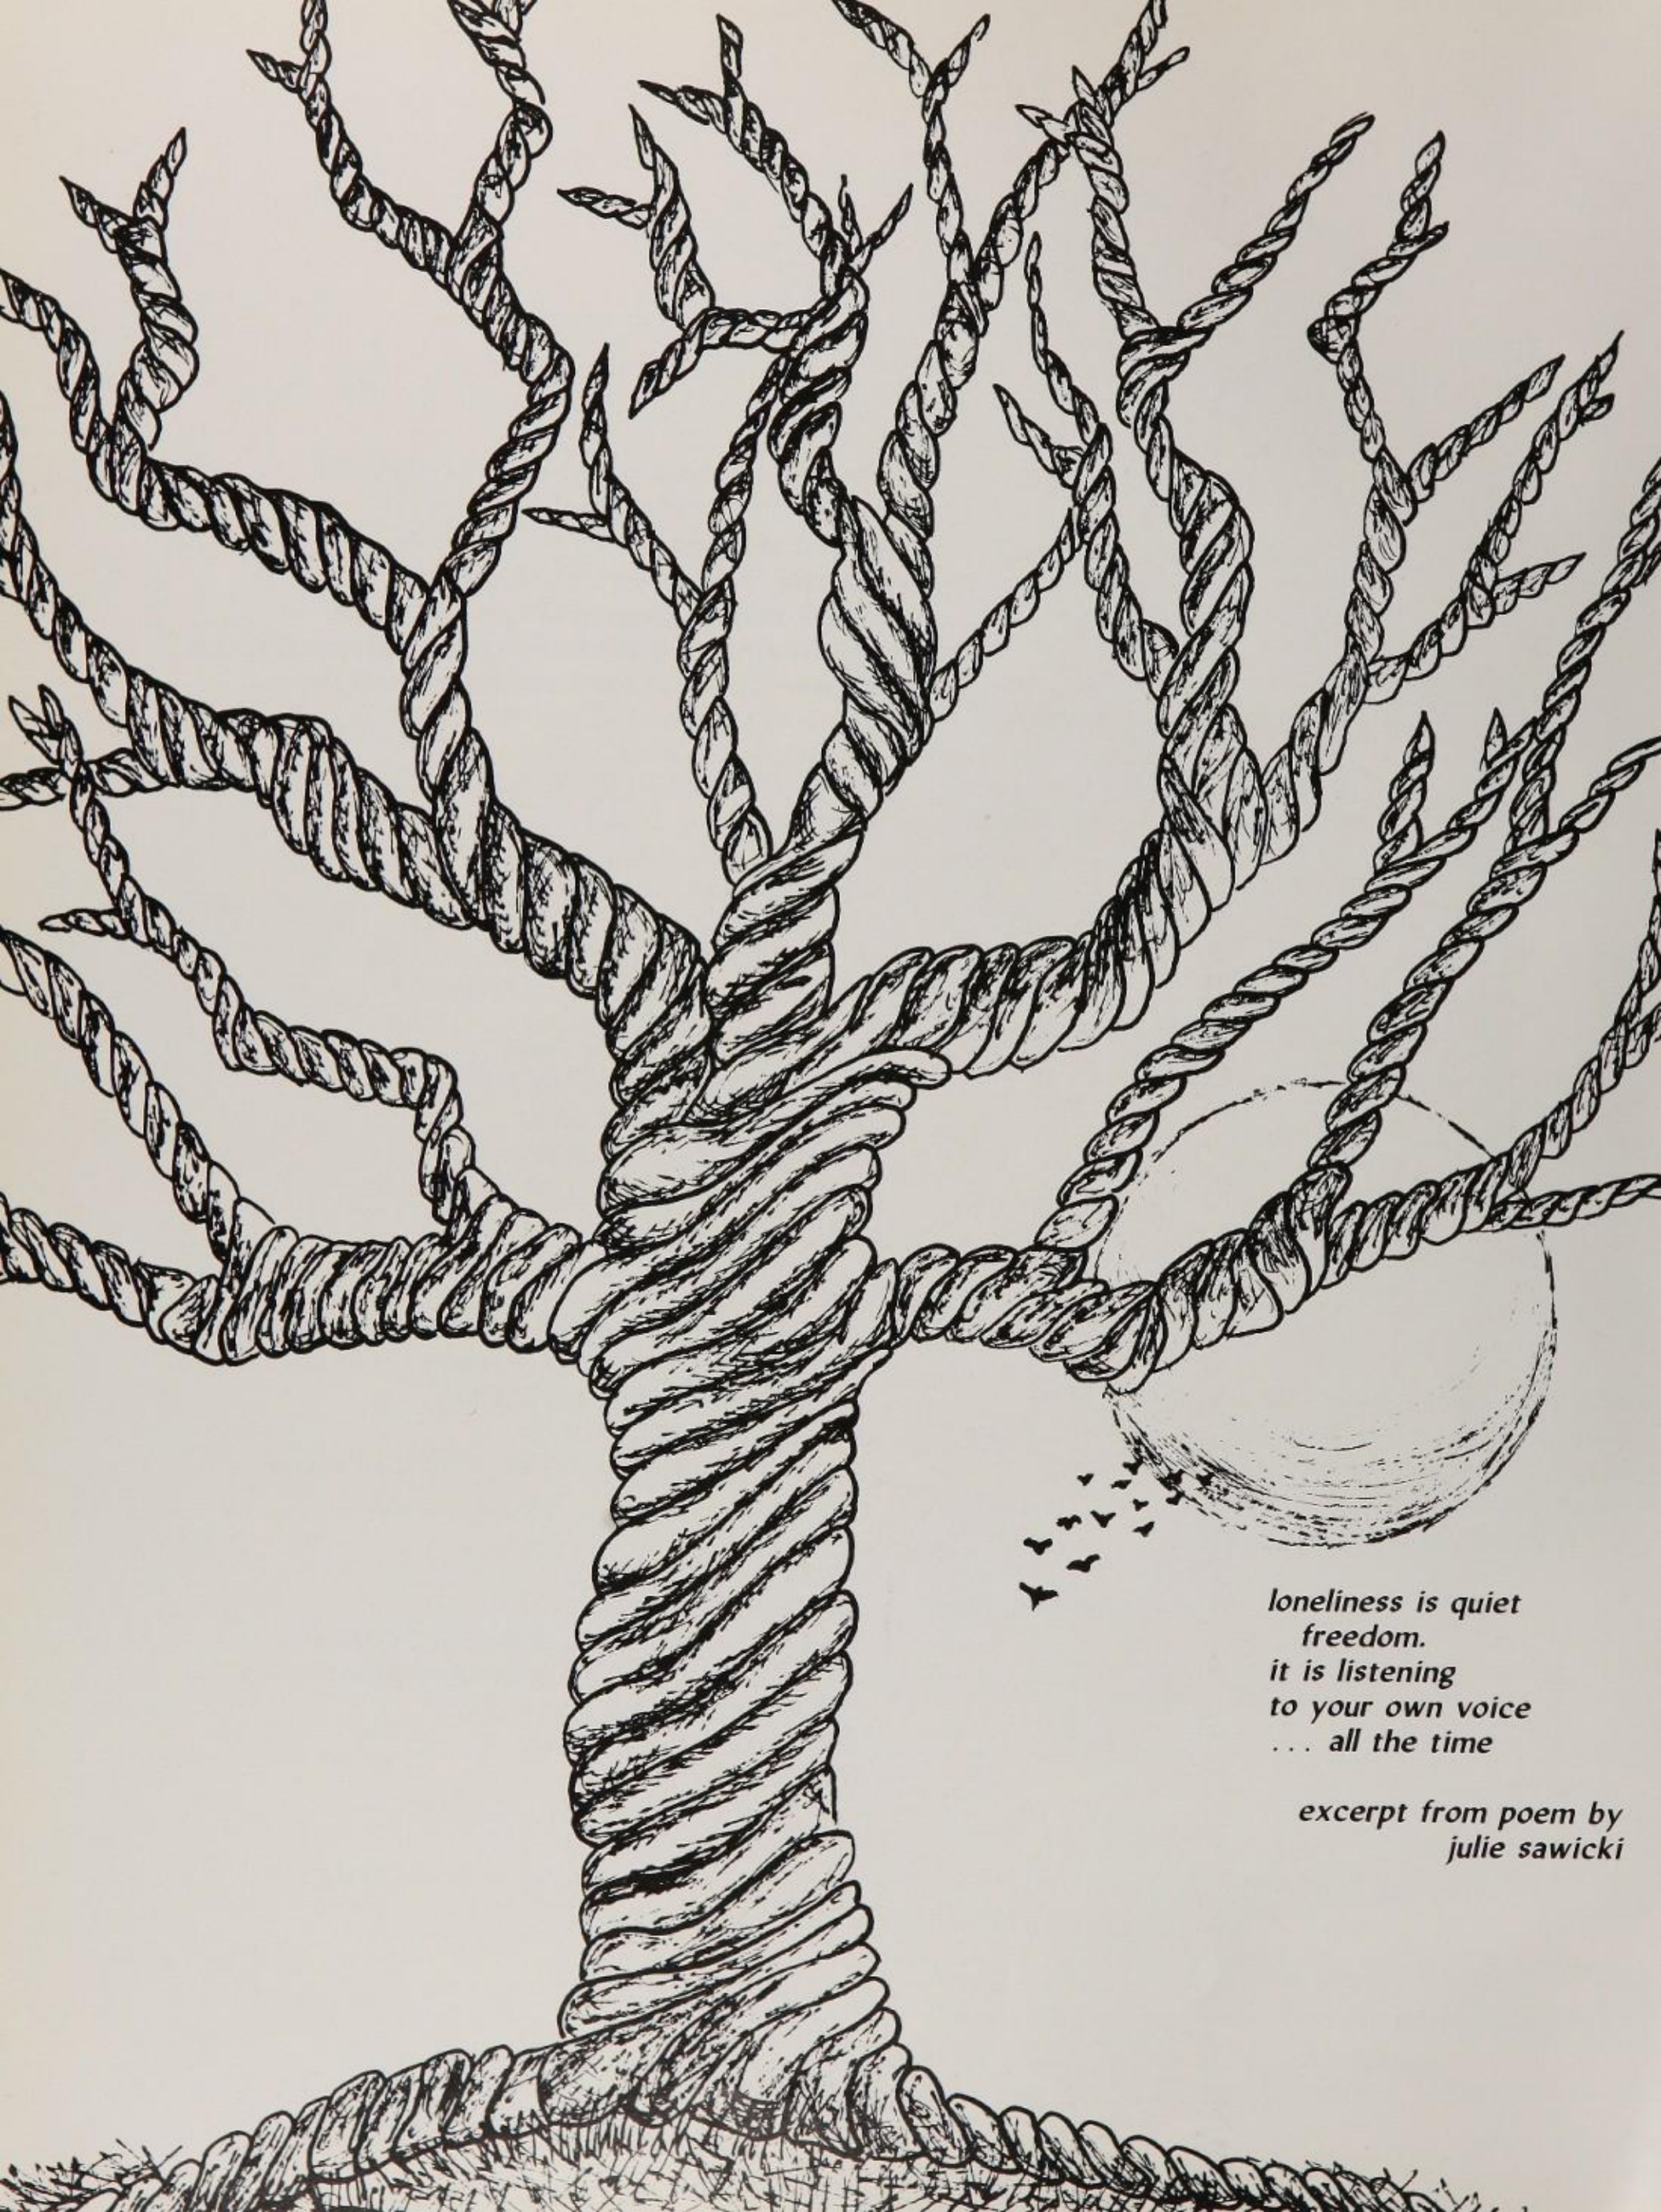
elisabeth lesar



loneliness is quiet
freedom.
it is listening
to your own voice

a yearbook, being such as it is, is a volume of captured time. we, the log committee, found our task often very difficult. but, the gratification of its completion is continuous in your enjoyment and appreciation. we conceive yearbooks as the endings of high school years. however, this cleveland log ends with a beginning of a memory.

the biology department wishes much luck and good fortune to the class of 1980. we leave you with the words of charles darwin:

"false facts are highly injurious to the progress of science, for they often endure long; but false views, if supported by some evidence, do little harm, for everyone takes a salutary pleasure in proving their falseness; and when this is done, one path toward error is closed and the road to truth is often at the same time opened."
